LAST YEAR HAS BEEN BUSY ONE FOR THE PRESIDENT

Roosevelt Delivered Many Important Addresses, Smoothed Matters With Japan, And Made Memorable Trip Down Mississippi.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 26.—President Roosevelt will be 49 years old tomorrow. The twelve months just closed have been a busy period for the chief executive, and during that time he has accomplished many things for the public good. His words and deeds have kept him constantly in the forefront of the world's observation, and during the recent weeks he has been more than ever, if possible, a conspicuous figure on the stage of affairs. In a variety of ways he has claimed the attention of the press and the community at large, but from many standpoints he has been most prominent in relation to the railroads and other great corporations. Incidentally he has made much to smooth away the ill-feeling between the United States and Japan over the disturbances in San Francisco, at the same time preserving a firm attitude by sending or arranging to send a great fleet of American warships to the Pacific Coast.

Among the first public acts of his 19th year was the delivery of his message to Congress last December. Later the president sent special messages to congress on the discharge of the colored troops of the Twenty-fifth Infantry, urging shipbuilding legislation and for prompt action in regard to the break in the Colorado river threatening the Imperial Valley, and in regard to several other matters of more or less public interest and importance. Early in the present year he sent Secretary Root to Canada to confer with the Governor-General on questions of common interest to the peoples of the United States and Canada. In March he reorganized his cabinet and in the same month sent Secretary Taft to Panama and Cuba to look into the condition of affairs there. Later he arranged the famous around-the-world trip for the secretary of war, the results of which are expected to be of great importance in cementing the friendly relations of the United States and several foreign countries.

Early in the year he gave considerable attention to the disturbed condition of affairs in Central America and finally made a successful intervention in behalf of arbitration to settle the hostilities between Nicaragua and Honduras. In regard to the number and importance of his public addresses the year just closed has been a strenuous one for the president. One of his first addresses of the year was delivered at the dedication of the Rough Holms Monument in Arlington Cemetery. Three addresses were delivered at the Jamestown exposition. The president also spoke at the dedication of the monument to Gen. George B. McClellan in the capital. During the latter part of May he took a short trip into the middle west and spoke at the unveiling of the Lawton monument at Indianapolis and at the semi-centennial celebration of the Michigan Agricultural College at Lansing.

On June 12 the president arrived at Oyster Bay for his summer vacation, which was broken only by his trip to Provincetown, Mass., to speak at the laying of the foundation stone for a memorial to be erected there to the Pilgrim Fathers. In this address, which attracted much attention throughout the country, the president again defined the policy of the Administration regarding the prosecution of law breakers.

In the last week of September the president quitted Oyster Bay and after a day or two in Washington started on his memorable Mississippi river trip. On the way he stopped at Canton to speak at the dedication of the McKinley memorial. In the course of his journey down the Mississippi from Keokuk to Memphis he delivered three notable addresses dealing with various subjects such as the Government's relation to railroad investments, the policy of the Administration with regard to the trusts, and the duties of inter-day American arbitration. At Memphis he was heard on the subject of deepwaterways, a question in which he had previously evidenced his deep interest by the appointment of the Inland Waterways Commission. After a week or two spent in hunting in the Louisiana canebrakes the president started on the return to Washington, speaking en route at Vicksburg and Nashville.

The president apparently was never in more perfect health or in better spirits than now, prepared to push his policies with the utmost vigor during the sixteen months he is to remain at the helm of the nation's affairs.

According to announcement made at the White House no arrangements have been made for any celebration of the president's birthday, and in all probability he will pass the day very much according to the routine which usually marks his observance of the Sabbath. The only reminder of the approach of the birthday anniversary was the arrival of a number of early messages of congratulation today. These came from friends and admirers in all sections of the country.

Nobody's Claim.

From the time she shoots down the N. W. telegraph wire to stop the sending of a message and save a friend, till we find her alone and nearly dead across her father's grave, in a blinding snow storm in a mountain pass, the latter when she appears at the outland headquarters just in time to save Ward Deveraux from the angry flames, and later when on the black charger, she with an American flag leads the U. S. Cavalry in a successful battle with the outlaws, Little Madge, the wife of the hills and heroine of "Nobody's Claim" finds a soft spot in our affections and makes a lasting impression on us. She will be at the Myers theatre this evening.

To be a pioneer is for the most part a rather thankless profession; to blaze trails through unexplored territory where one is uncertain of the outcome is both dangerous and often not possessed of reward adequate to the work undertaken and carried through to nominal success. On the other hand it may mean a financial reward that would be impossible of acquisition by following the beaten path, and this, the right sort of reward, in fame and money, has been the portion of George M. Cohen, the youthful author-composer of "Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway," which Klaw & Erlanger present at the Myers theatre Thursday, Oct. 31, with Miss Emma Carus in the principal role. Mr. Cohen's version of a land untrod by writers for the stage was in making a good, strong and at all times interesting play, melodramatic in its action, but always plausible in its outcome, and adding thereto several good musical numbers that would be a part of the whole and would help in working the story out to its logical end. And these are the rules that he has made use of in his wonderfully successful play which is to be seen in this city. The play itself is so good and so all-absorbing that it could, if the necessity arose, dispense with the musical numbers and still be a splendid evening's entertainment, and the songs that are entrusted to Miss Carus and her associates, including an unusually attractive group of chorists, would make a success of even a poor play. With these two unusually strong component parts it is no wonder that the piece as a whole has proved to be a veritable sensation in the theatrical world.

In presenting Joseph Howard and Annie Harrison in their new production "The Flower of the Ranch" on November 2, the Janesville Lodge 254, B. P. O. E. are offering a stellar attraction. The success which greeted Mr. Howard's musical comedy, "The District Leader," in Janesville last season, is a guarantee of this season's production. The music is entirely the songs are clever, the principals too well known to need eulogizing. The production has a western twang to it that makes it delightful and not too much tragedy to make it a melodrama of the straight type. Mr. Howard is happy in his musical selection and his arrangements for Miss Harrison's songs are said to be excellent. The performance here has been purchased outright by the local lodge of Elks and is strictly an Elks show. In order that all may have an equal opportunity of securing seats the sale will be opened at the People's drug store on Monday morning, next, at nine o'clock. Arrangements are now pending for this production being the winter attraction at the Studebaker theatre, Chicago, consequently Janesville is to hear it before Chicago does. It has had a most successful road season playing Detroit, Kansas City, and other large cities.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

President Roosevelt has been criticized and ridiculed for discussing the race suicide question and for commending American homes as ideal, where children abound. His solicitude is prompted by knowledge of the fact that in this fair land are found two million childless homes, where the prattle of the baby has never been heard, and where the baby's influence has never been felt.

The "Dollmaker" recently inaugurated a "Child-rescue" campaign for the child that needs a home and the home that needs a child. The discovery has been made that there are 30,000 homeless waifs in New York City and 150,000 more scattered over the country.

The publishers of the magazine believe that among the two million childless homes, places can be found for this little army of homeless babies, and so have taken up the philanthropic work.

Every issue of the publication will contain a department devoted to the work, in which will appear photographs of homeless children with brief sketches of parentage and circumstances which led to their forlorn condition.

The first case reported is pathetic, and should touch the heart of some home which would be made happier by the presence of a child. The magazine tells the story better than it can be rewritten, and the Gazette reproduces it because the work is so praiseworthy that it is entitled to every encouragement. Here it is.

"The first Dollmaker child offered for adoption is Evelyn, aged seven, a little girl from Philadelphia. She is a winsome little maiden whose sweet face makes its own appeal from these pages. According to the regulations of the society having her in charge, she must be placed in a home somewhere in the state of Pennsylvania.

"Shy brown eyes with deep amber shadows, and a sensitive, mobile face indicating an infinite capacity for suffering,—these tell Evelyn's story. It is written that all the pain and sorrow of life this child shall feel most acutely. You see what prompted her mother's heroism.

"To spare her little daughter the acquaintance with grief that comes with the first knowledge of death, this woman counted no cost too great. She was a plain woman of the common people, but she paid a price of which only a great nature may be capable. With only a happy faraway, she has passed to the great beyond. That no shadow of the parting should darken the young life she was leaving, she sweetly, smilingly effaced herself from the child's existence.

"Six months ago this mother brought her little girl, to the Children's Aid Society in Philadelphia, and went away by herself to die. To the superintendent in his private office she explained that there were no relatives. There had been a comfortable home until her husband's death. Then, to support herself and the child, it had been necessary for her to go out to domestic service, taking the little girl with her. But the work was hard and she was a frail woman. Now, her health was gone. The doctors had told her there was not much time left. She had all the arrangements made and was even now on her way to the hospital to await the end. Her strength was already so far gone that she had come through the city streets, walking for lack of car fare, she had been compelled to sit down with the child on one doorstep after another before she had completed the journey.

"So Evelyn became a charity ward. On the books of the society was recorded the fact of her American parentage and that her father was a laborer. Here it is recorded that her mother's was a rare spirit of close kinship to the divine. And Evelyn's inheritance from her mother is indicated in a personality of marked refinement that has survived the vicissitudes of a not always desirable environment.

"To the little girl on that day it was explained simply that the kind gentleman, the secretary of the society, would take her into the country for a nice vacation among the daisies. Satisfied, she contentedly slipped her hand in his.

"The good to my little girl," the mother breathed.

"Then she smiled into the child's eyes and kissed her. In another moment she had walked steadily out of the room to her grave.

"It was the bravest deed he ever saw, the man who witnessed it declared. As soon as the door had closed between her and the child, the smile on her lips had frozen to a drawn line of anguish. 'I haven't any more tears,' she said. 'I've cried them all away.' And she walked down the street dry-eyed.

"Today that mother is dead, and Evelyn doesn't even know. As they were directed, they are sparing her the knowledge until the nebulous mists of childhood shall have hung their kindly clouds over the memory of realities. Even it may happen that an idealized conception of a mother may be transferred to another woman sent to take the dead mother's place, perhaps.

"Among the child's most strongly pronounced characteristics are a sweet temper and an affectionate disposition. Her mind is restless and energetic and the habit of concentration might be cultivated to advantage.

"The Children's Aid Society is paying Evelyn's board in the country. Meantime they are looking for a permanent home for her. By the sacred trust that her mother imposed on them it must be a good, kind home. She is offered for legal adoption. The exact steps to be taken may be learned by writing Edwin D. Solonberger, General Secretary of the Children's Aid Society of Pennsylvania, 1506 Arch Street, Philadelphia."

That's the story of a mother's heroism, and people who believe that "blood tells" will not be slow to believe that the character of this unselfish mother will be reflected in the child for which she was so solicitous.

There ought to be plenty of wide open doors in America for this class of children, and there are if the child and home can find each other.

These homeless children are not confined to the larger cities, but are scattered over the country and represented in almost every community. Janesville has a case of this kind today, where the mother with five little children, deserted by the husband and father, is at a loss to know how to keep the little brood together.

The State Home for Dependent Children at Sparta offers the only solution, and here the children will probably be sent.

That children are the heritage of the poor is generally recognized and the fact was forcefully illustrated by figures recently compiled, which show that fifteen blocks on Fifth avenue, New York, contain only fifteen children, while one block on the east side, in the tenement district, contains 100 children.

The same correspondent finds that every sixth home in Massachusetts is childless, while in the state of Iowa the population is declining.

The fact is that children are regarded as a nuisance by many people. The better class of tenements, in all large cities, draw the line on children, and many fashionable hotels and boarding houses adopt the same policy.

The demands of society so thoroughly absorb the time and energy of young women that the thought of a child in the home is like a nightmare, and so the home is deprived of the brightest jewel that ever graces a home.

The most forlorn people living today are the wretched people who are trudging down the shady slope of life alone. They have reached an age where the pace of social life is too rapid for either pleasure or comfort, and as they watch the procession glide by they realize the shallowness of social friendship.

The baby was lacking in the early home and the son and daughter are lacking in the years when the flow of blood are the only ties which endure the strain.

The most shallow homes in the land are the homes where the cry of a baby is never heard, and where the busy life of restless childhood never awakes.

The soft touch of a baby's fingers cements the bonds of wedlock and under the gentle pressure jealousies disappear and the journey of life takes on new significance.

Better than a cabinet of club prizes is a baby in the home. This fact is fully appreciated by the Dollmaker publishers, and their efforts to bring joy and gladness to childless homes are entitled to every encouragement.

THE CITY BANKS.

Janesville people have occasion to congratulate themselves on the soundness of the local banking houses. Noted for conservatism and good judgment, they are today in position to inspire the confidence which they enjoy.

The banks which have suffered in the past are largely responsible for conditions, because many of them were loaded with speculative paper which could not be readily converted. This is never considered safe banking, for a panic is liable to occur at any time.

Western banks pursue a more conservative policy, and as a result the west today is financially sound, with no occasion for alarm.

While there is nothing dishonest about speculation, an element of gambling enters into it which makes it unsafe and causes embarrassment in times of stringency.

Money has been in such active demand for the past year that gilded commercial paper, which is usually taken care of by home banks, has been freely offered.

Janesville bankers have refused this class of paper so that they might be in position to care for the wants of home patrons. This has been done at a sacrifice of interest rates offered in excess of local rates, but it has kept home money in home channels.

Whatever may be the reflex influence of the Wall Street panic, Janesville depositors may be assured that their money is as safe today as it ever was. Confidence inspires confidence, and that is the one thing today which the people need to cultivate. The nation is rich in material wealth and after a breathing spell, which everybody needed, the era of prosperity will again be established.

Clever Move.

The British navy is to use subtlety in promoting the cause of temperance. Hitherto the names of totalitarians have been marked with a distinguishing letter in the ships' books, to separate them like white blackbirds. Hereafter it is to be the users of grog who are to be marked, and the abstinence that is to be taken for the normal thing.

No Cause for Jealousy.

"Mama," asked the beautiful young wife, "do you ever attach any significance to what papa says in his sleep?"

"No, dear. Don't let that worry you."

Weeds on Railroad Tracks.

For destroying weeds on the track a car has been experimentally fitted by the Illinois Central railroad. The car carries two tanks, each of 1,000 gallons capacity, from which a perforated pipe under the car is fed. Through this the ground is sprayed with a chemical solution. While one tank is being emptied chemicals are being mixed in the other. The water which forms the bulk of the solution being obtained from stations along the line.

Irish Kings.

There were plenty of Irish kings in early history and they were good fighters. Some historians have traced the line of native sovereigns of Ireland back as far as the time of the flood. Heber and Lirionn in 1300, B. C., are the first of whom there is any absolute certainty. Following them were 163 kings all of whom except fifteen died in battle or otherwise by violence. Home rule was in existence until 1172.

"He Had To Acknowledge The Corn"

The other day a dental traveling man was in to see Dr. Richards to get his teeth fixed.

In visiting together the doctor showed him some of the beautiful work he is putting out among his patients.

And asked him point blank, "In your visits among other dentists here do you see any such beautifully finished work as I am doing?"

Of course the traveling man hesitated saying much considering the fact that he sold goods to all the dentists in the city.

But he did acknowledge that this work was more finely finished than any he had seen in Janesville.

Now, the appearance shown him were not special cases but just regular finished work the same as Dr. Richards gives everybody.

You can fairly see your face reflected so fine in the polish he puts on his rubber plates. Now all this means extra work.

Extra care taken to give you the best there is.

And his prices are another attractive feature.

His patients never feel like calling him Dr. Big Boy.

Try him yourself for your next needed dental work.

Several little dinners, informal affairs have been given this past week among them one by Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Ford on Thursday night and Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Wilcox on Friday night.

Among the surprise parties of the past week was the one tendered Mrs. Frank Storm of 303 Western avenue by twenty of her friends last evening. It was in commemoration of her twenty-sixth birthday and a delightful evening was spent at cards and games after which a delicious supper was served. Before leaving the guests presented their hostess with a dainty piece of china with their compliments.

LINE-FENCE DISPUTE SETTLED OUT OF COURT

Judge Fiffeld This Morning Dismissed The Action Against Mrs. Martha Williams.

Sometime ago Charles Viney who lives at 174 Washington street complained that Mrs. Martha A. Williams who lives on the property adjoining had mutilated the line fence which separates them. It developed in municipal court this morning that the trouble had its inception when Mrs. Williams learned some boards against the fence and used nails to keep them in place, and Mr. Viney—deeming this an intrusion on his rights—knocked the boards down. After much debate between District Attorney Fisher and the controversy, Judge Fiffeld dismissed the case with the understanding that both parties should pursue a let-the-fence-alone policy hereafter.

DENEEN FOR OGLESBY BILL

GOVERNOR APPROVES THE DIRECT PRIMARY MEASURE.

His Supporters in Illinois House and Senate Are Determined to Make It Law.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 26.—Friends of the state administration will lead the fight next week for the passage of the Oglesby direct primary bill in the senate. Gov. Deneen has indicated the measure and his supporters in both the senate and the house will stand by it as long as there is a possibility of its passage.

Gov. Deneen Friday afternoon said that the bill in its present form met his approval. Secretary of State Howe and other state officers also have announced that it is satisfactory to them. These declarations have given rise to a general conviction that the opposition to the measure is based largely on fear of political annihilation, and this argument will be used in an endeavor to bring together sufficient strength to pass the bill with the emergency clause.

Twenty-four votes for the bill in its present form were counted in the senate. Little trouble is anticipated in procuring the additional two votes necessary to pass the bill, and by some a rush is predicted to result when it is apparent that the measure is to become a law. All the law makers went home Friday.

Madrid, Oct. 26.—The alarming reports circulated earlier in the month regarding the health of King Alfonso appear to be confirmed. It is understood the king, who will travel under the strictest precautions as duke of Toledo during his coming visit to London, will submit to the examination of a specialist in tuberculosis, from which disease his father died. The king's open air life thus far has kept the hereditary disposition in abeyance and an operation was performed on him recently in the hope of checking the growing symptoms of consumption.

Woman's Nightmare

No woman's happiness can be complete without children; it is her nature to love and want them as much as it is to love the beautiful and pure.

The critical ordeal through which the expectant mother must pass, however, is so fraught with dread, pain, suffering and danger, that the very thought of it fills her with apprehension and horror. There is no necessity for the reproduction of life to be either painful or dangerous. The use of Mother's Friend so prepares the system for the coming event that it is safely passed without any danger. Take Your Choice—a Drug or a Food

Physicians of the highest scientific attainments unite in declaring that coffee is a form of slow poison—a pernicious drug. They point out that it darkens the blood, clogs the liver, colors the skin, weakens the heart's action and ruins the digestion of all who drink it. On the other hand, doctors declare that a pure bottled beer, properly brewed from Malt and Hops, and fully aged, like is a most wholesome and delicious beverage. Gund's Peerless Beer being made from malted barley, is essentially a "food-stuff" of high nutritive value. If drunk regularly with meals it clears the liver, enriches the blood, brightens the skin, stimulates the gastric secretions and wonderfully promotes the digestive process. Thus it is that the beer-drinking races of men are the healthiest and in the forefront of the World's progress.

PROFESSOR MOLESCHOTT, the celebrated German savant, says: "A good beer is as nutritious as fruit. Fermented liquors taken in moderation increase the secretions of the digestive juices and promotes the assimilation of food."

PEERLESS BEER won the Gold Medal at the St. Louis Exposition for highest excellence. Contains less than 3 1/2 % of alcohol, therefore is really a temperance drink. Doctors prescribe it for the weak and sick. Used at all high-class health resorts. Delivered at homes on request by phone or mail. Sold at all cafes, saloons, hotels and buffets. Bottled only at brewery.

BREAKS HER RUDDER AT SEA

ACCIDENT TO THE KAISER WILHELM DER GROSSE.

Liner Proceeds to Plymouth, Steering with Her Screws—No Cause for Anxiety.

New York, Oct. 20.—The North German Lloyd steamship Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which sailed from here Tuesday, broke her rudder while just east of the Grand Banks of Newfoundland, approaching midocean Friday. She proceeded, steering with her screws.

The steamer is due in Plymouth Monday, but may be somewhat delayed by the accident, which, however, is not considered serious. Her return on schedule will depend on whether a spare rudder can be shipped on arrival at Bremen.

News of the mishap was received by Oelrichs & Co., the local agents of the line, from Capt. Polack. The wireless message, which came by way of Cape Race, follows:

"On Friday morning at 2:35 o'clock, October 23, the rudder of the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse was broken, in latitude 46 north and longitude 46.44 west. We are now steering with our screws. All on board are well."

Southampton, Oct. 26.—The new bow built for the White Star line steamer Sunnyside, to replace the one lost on Star Rock, near the Lizard last March, which was launched at Belfast, docked here Friday after a portly voyage of six days from that port.

WIRE MEN ELECT BEATTIE.

New President of Telegraphers Makes Move to End Strike.

Milwaukee, Oct. 20.—The telegraphers' convention adjourned and the Friday night after electing W. W. Beattie, of Washington, D. C., as president; H. J. Horn, Cincinnati, first vice president, and A. S. Lehigh, St. Louis, Mo., third vice president. Orville A. Glen retained his office as second vice president. Frank T. Liles, of Chicago, and C. M. P. Smith, of Salt Lake, were added to the executive board.

The first official act of President Beattie was to appoint two committees of three each to go to New York to endeavor to meet with the officials of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies with a view to bringing about a settlement of the strike.

St. Louis, Oct. 20.—Manager R. H. Bohle, of the Western Union Telegraph company offices here, stated Friday night that 22 telegraphers who have been out on strike, applied for their former positions and that most of them will return to the keys at once.

SOLDIERS' CHILDREN HURT.

Street Car Hits Wagon Carrying Them Home from School.

Columbus, O., Oct. 20.—Ten persons, nine children and a soldier, were injured when a Mount Vernon avenue street car struck a wagon from the United States army post carrying children from school to their homes on the government reservation late Friday afternoon. One of the children, Freda Elmsberg, aged 12, daughter of the post quartermaster sergeant, suffered internal injuries and may die.

Delicate Women

who suffer from sleeplessness, backache, or pain will find relief by taking Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. They are quick in action, relieving headache in a few minutes, while nearly every other form of pain yields to their soothing influence. A great many women have found that a few carried with them, insures immunity from suffering.

"I am one who has suffered for 13 years every month. For several years I took doctors' medicine, until I gave up to suffer until death. One day when I was in great pain, Mr. Miles, for whom I was working, gave me a box of Anti-Pain Pills. At first I refused them but he insisted on my trying them a trial, and I must say they are the only thing that I ever took that relieved me without putting me to sleep. Last August I began to use them and within a few days I was cured. I am cured now and I had only one pill this month. I recommend them to women who suffer, and believe they can live without pain if they will take Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills."

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first package will benefit. If it fails, you will receive your money back, 25 cents. Never sold in bulk. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

His Courtship

By HELEN R. MARTIN,
Author of "Tillie: A Mennonite Maid."

Copyright, 1907, By McClure, Phillips & Company.

"Och, her," she retorted contemptuously; "she's dunnit!" (Stupid.) "But Ollie she's got an elegant education," she affirmed, standing in the kitchen doorway, with her bare arms resting on her ample hips, while Dr. Kiroos leaned against a pillar of the porch, his eyes following the young chickens which ran about on the grass. "I left her to go to school till she was fifteen, hardly. I made her learn more for books and study, and all like that, than what Ollie was, but," she said dramatically, "she ain't got Ollie's nice education, but her bel's'nt adopted that way and not my own flesh and blood. I took her out of school till she was twelve. She cried wonderful to be left alone, but I told her beggars couldn't be choosers and she must earn her livin'." So then she never said nothing more about it. Ollie she can converse pretty," Mrs. Morningstar said.

and then when she had to come off of school she took on; it was somepin awful!"

"But a twelve-year-old girl is hardly capable of reading what she is learning in having no schooling?" he said questioningly.

"She was always wonderful for study—full much so. A body couldn't get no work out of her once she got half of a book—and that's why pop he sayed now she must come off school, he sayed, or she'd soon not be earning her food."

"Umph!" again granted Kiroos, surprised into a pang of pity for the flower girl who was the household drudge to the farmer's family.

"Say," Mrs. Morningstar abruptly demanded, "do you want for me to tell her here two young ladies when they come that you ain't much for sociability and that they're to leave you be and not bother you any, you bel's'nt some queer?"

"Now, Mrs. Morningstar," he smiled, "you are a friend in need. Suppose you do want them off. Where are they from?"

"From into town. Their names is Georgiana Ellery and Daisy Parks," Kiroos lifted his hand and looked at Mrs. Morningstar, surprise, annoyance, consternation, in his face.

"Gods and little fishes!" He pulled his Panama hat over his eyes, turned abruptly and strode away. Mrs. Morningstar stood stolidly where he left her, gazing after him as he walked with long steps through the orchard toward the woods where he usually spent most of the day, and finally she shook her head and drew a long breath.

"It beats me what for a man he is, anyhow!"

CHAPTER II.

A HALF hour later, his tall length stretched under the trees of the wood that skirted the north side of the Morningstar farm, Dr. Kiroos gave vent to his vexation.

"Georgiana Ellery and Daisy Parks! The daughter of old Presy and his niece! Could a man have worse luck? Goodby to my liberty! No more doing as I please and being an uncivilized and buccle as primitive man! What, in the name of all the gods, possesses two such highly-civilized beings to want to spend any time out here? Why, they can't out the cooking; it's out of the question. I couldn't myself if I didn't voluntarily suspend consciousness while staying off starvation—a small price to pay for such days of freedom as I've had! I'd think these girls were pursuing me if I didn't know they were not. But," he groaned, "they'll think it a jolly lark to find me here! They'll get out of it all there is in it. Damn!" He thumped the ground.

"I'll take care that there'll be precious little in it for them. I'm not going to be bullied into spoiling my vacation by two chucky girls!"

Such the misanthropic sentiments and such the language with which Peter Kiroos faced a situation complicated by the fact that the expected arrivals were the daughter and niece respectively of the president of the college in which he himself was the professor of psychology.

Dr. Kiroos, however, had never seen either of these girls, inasmuch as during the past year since he had taken the chair of psychology they had both been away at a woman's college. But he had heard a great deal about Miss Ellery, the president's daughter. And some of Kiroos' fellow professors who were apt to badger him on his hardness of heart toward the gentler sex had predicted his speedy surrender to the beauty, culture and wealth of Miss Ellery when she should return to college.

"It will do me good to see her turn you down," the professor of literature had declared with feeling, speaking out of the depth of his own bitter experience at the hands of the fair Georgiana.

But these predictions had made so little impression upon Kiroos that with the immediate prospect of meeting Miss Ellery the only interest he felt in her was a curiosity to understand the mystery of her having chosen to come to the Morningstar farm to spend her summer vacation—a girl notoriously fastidious in her tastes and so much of a belle among the clever men of the college faculty that her voluntarily coming to bury herself in such an out of the way place as this farm seemed to him a second mystery thrust upon his unwilling contemplation and calculated to supersede that other mystery of the girl Ellery, which in the past fortnight had been constantly arresting his attention.

The truth about Dr. Kiroos was that he was afraid of young girls. All the circumstances of his boyhood and youth had tended to pervert a natural super-sensitiveness into an awkward and painful self-consciousness in the presence of women. His mother having died in his infancy, his acquaintance with the feminine sex in his childhood had been almost entirely confined to the negro servants of his father's household. With his inelegant manner and had developed, through unfamiliarity of intercourse, an awe of girls that had caused him untold sufferings if forced into any conventional responsibilities with them.

The social ease and fluency of his younger brother, Burton, seemed to be ter in those days a height of achievement to which he looked up with envy and admiration. But Burton's view of the variation between them was fully expressed one day to Miss Wolcott, their nearest family neighbor.

"Pete plants himself in a corner at a party, scowls, hasn't a word to say, can't dance and can't play cards. And he'll make an average of six crashes at every party that did makes him go to. I can dance, play cards, converse and make myself agreeable, and I don't average one crash a month. How would you explain it?"

"Crash?" gently inquired Miss Wolcott, a bachelor maiden of thirty-five.

"Beg pardon. I mean none of the girls get stuck on me. But they pursue Pete to his corner, and when he is rude and disagreeable to them they say he is original and 'magnetic.' You wouldn't suppose, would you, they'd take to a stiff like Pete?"

"It would be much more reasonable of them to 'take to' a polished and accomplished gentleman like you, Burton," said Miss Wolcott consolingly. And Burton accepted her sympathetic view with complacency and with a high opinion of Miss Wolcott's judgment.

As Peter grew older he succeeded in conquering after long and extraordinary struggles with himself at least the external signs of his inward perturbation in the society of young ladies. But his mental attitude toward the sex continued to be a mixture of suspicion, contempt, curiosity, mystification and attraction, which so baffled and irritated him that he had come to look upon any contact with girls as an element disturbing to all intellectual labor or anything else in his life that was really worth while.

His social life at Meckville college had been a constant battle in trying (on the whole vainly) to elude the flattering attentions society was determined to heap upon the good looking young professor who had the very unusual attraction of a comparatively large independent fortune. The fact that he was difficult and elusive only added zest to the quest.

And yet there really lived in the background of his consciousness, hardly recognized by himself, an ideal love, a passionate yearning to be met, to find a perfect comradship. He did not himself know how deep was the longing and the need in his soul for some relation in life in which his strongly emotional nature could find outlet.

So far was he from conceiving the possibility of discovering in the naturally charming and gifted Miss Ellery his soul's inevitable companion that there came to him as he lay on his back gazing up into the trees of the old forest a grotesque plot for ending the society of the expected damsels and insuring the continuance of his freedom.

"I swear I'll do it!" he exclaimed, and his shout of laughter at the original amusement he foresaw in his scheme echoed through the woods.

"It will give me a chance," he reflected, "to study the psychology of the youthful feminine which I rarely come to a philosopher! An opportunity to observe it at first hand when it is off its guard and quite unwatched! How's sport?"

But the young ladies would arrive at noon. There was no time to be lost. He sprang from the ground, gathered up the books that were his daily companions in his rambles and started for the farm.

On his way he speculated as to whether the Morningstars would bear him out in his plot. He foresaw the stupefaction of their unimaginative minds before his behavior. And Ellery would this galvanize her into some signs of animation? If, before the role he was about to play, that girl could possibly maintain the aloofness, the apparent unconsciousness of what was under her eyes, the blind, deaf and dumb demeanor that she had kept up ever since he had come to this place—if she kept it up now—well, in that case there would be nothing left to do but cast off all reserve and demand that she explain herself.

SOLVAY COKE

Do not accept the thorough advertising of Solvay Coke as a passing fad.

Substantial and Economical Fuel for Stoves, Furnaces and Ranges

It replaces wood and hard coal and makes a showing equal with anthracite coal and ONE-HALF AS EXPENSIVE AS WOOD

OCTOBER PRICES, $7.00 PER TON

All orders placed in October will be taken at $7.00 per ton. Nov. 1st the price advances to $7.50 per ton. Save 20 per cent of your fuel bill! SMOKELESS! CHEAP! SOOTLESS! "Use it just as you would Hard Coal."

DIRECTIONS

Build the fire same as for coal. Put on moderate supply of Coke before lighting, and in a few minutes you have a good fire. If the Coke is very dry you may moisten the next lot you put on, and it will give you a steadier fire and last longer. Shake down ash only in the morning and stop when first bright coals drop. To keep over night, let the ashes collect about two inches over the grate, fill the fire-box well up with fine damp Coke, and in about two minutes close the draughts.

REMEMBER—Do not shake or rake the fire much. This fuel requires but little draft when once ignited. It is more economical to have a large body of Coke under a slow fire, than a little Coke burning a quick fire

KILAUEA WORTH A VISIT.

Hawaii's Show Volcano is One of the World's Wonders.

Kilauea, the spur of the great Mauna Loa, is a well-behaved volcano, as it can be visited with perfect safety, even if in eruption—as it is from time to time—when exhibitions of activity are given that are worth traveling thousands of miles to witness. This volcano is on the island of Hawaii, and the shortest possible trip that can be made to it from Honolulu covers four days. This allows only half a day at the volcano, which is much too short a time to study the workings of what is considered one of the world's wonders. A week at least should be given to the trip. The sea voyage is always more or less rough, but the boats, although small, are comfortable. From Hilo, where the water trip ends, there is a railroad ride of about 18 miles through the big Olua sugar plantation. This is followed by a stage run of 11 miles over a road leading through a perfect fairyland of tropical foliage, the highway being lined on either side with roses, magnolias and ferns, which last grow to the size of trees without losing any of their delicate beauty. Returning by the other route, there is a stage drive of 35 miles over lava roads and across the great flow which ran into the sea from Mauna Loa several years ago.—Lusile's Weekly.

TREES THAT LIVE CENTURIES.

One at Least is Known to be Over 700 Years Old.

Brazilian coconut palms live from 600 to 700 years, and the Arabs assert that the date palm frequently reaches the age of 200 to 300 years. Wallia's oak, near Paisley, Scotland, is known to be over 700 years old, and there are eight olive trees on the Mount of Olives near Jerusalem which are known to have been flourishing in 1090. The yews at Fontaines Abbey, Yorkshire, were old trees when in 1133 the abbey was built, and a redwood in Mariposa Grove, Cal., is a manifold centenarian. Hoahab trees of Africa have been computed to be over 5,000 years old, and the deciduous cypress at Chippewee is considered to be of a still greater age. Humboldt said that the dracaena draco at Orotava, on Teneriffe, was one of the oldest inhabitants of the earth.

The Oldest Tunnel.

Glenfield tunnel, on the Leicester and Swannington railway, is the oldest tunnel in the world. It is about a mile long, and is the oldest section of the Midland company's system. Only four passenger trains pass through the tunnel each week day, and from Saturday night until Monday morning the tunnel is closed by a padlock door at either end.
